Mosquitoes and the New Zika Virus: What Can Mississippians Do to Protect Themselves?

Dr. Jerome Goddard - Extension Professor of Medical & Veterinary Entomology

Zika virus, a mosquito-transmitted virus new to the Americas, has been in the news because of its devastating effects on unborn children. Due to people returning from travel to Central & South America and the Caribbean this summer, there is a possibility Zika virus may become established in the southern U.S. This talk will explore this new disease threat and provide ways for citizens to protect themselves.

County offices may sign up for these programs by going to: http://msucare.com/distance_ed/index.html to use the online county sign up system, or email us at DistanceEd@ext.msstate.edu, or call our office.
